Eidco Construction Retained to Oversee Interior Renovation at Chicago Nursing Home

Project Entails Transforming Facility Despite Limited Budget

CHICAGO, Ill. (April 9, 2012) – Eidco Construction, one of the fastest growing general contractors in the United States, today announced that it has been retained to oversee a 17,113-square-foot, interior renovation for Central Nursing & Rehabilitation Center, located at 2450 North Central Avenue in Chicago, Ill.

The project, which was designed by Eidco in collaboration with design firm Margalit Lankry Design, will feature the installation of new Acrovyn handrails and corner guards in the corridors, as well as the installation of new vinyl composition tile and luxury vinyl tile flooring in the facility's lobby, reception area, administrator's office, nurses' station, corridors and lounges on floors one through four. Eidco will also install new millwork at the facility's nurses' stations and reception area.

"Working within a limited budget is always a design challenge. But by leveraging the ingenuity of my design staff and Eidco's project team, we're able to find cost efficiencies that allow us to do more with less," said Lankry. "By using great color combinations and a unique flooring pattern, we really able to transform the space. We updated and enhanced the facility to make it a more current and comfortable space for the residents."

Eidco Project Manager Bradley Peterson will lead the firm's effort.

"As nursing facilities expand to provide necessary care to more patients, it becomes even more imperative that their properties are in top condition," said Chez Eider, CEO of Eidco Construction. "Eidco has carved out a niche as a company that is reinventing the design of these facilities, and the completion of this project will enable Central Nursing & Rehab to grow and continue to provide quality nursing care for its patients."
